Mary Beth's current civil litigation practice focuses primarily on torts, labor and employment, and workers' compensation claims. She litigates all over Tennessee in accident cases, malpractice claims, workers' compensation, and collections. She enjoys litigation and welcomes the chance to represent the interest of her clients in court appearances. Her diverse practice is very beneficial to her clients.

After graduating from the University of Virginia, she returned to Tennessee where she attended the University of Tennessee College of Law. She joined Frantz, McConnell & Seymour, LLP in 1998, and became a partner in 2003. Mary Beth is listed as a Rule 31 certified civil and family law mediator in the State of Tennessee. She is the upcoming co-chair of the Tennessee Bar Association Leadership Law Program and is a member of the Tennessee Bar Association and Defense Research Institute. She served as a member at large for the Knoxville Bar Association and founded and chaired the Work/Life Balance Committee. She is also a member of the Hamilton Burnett Inn of Court.

Outside of her practice, she enjoys being a parent and a volunteer – from PTO boards, fundraising committees for ChildHelp USA, to past Chair of the Florence Crittenton Agency Board. She is married to an attorney, and they have two children and a yellow lab who keep them quite busy. She also assists with her church's children's program, and is serving with the Women's Fund of East Tennessee.

One of Mary Beth's greatest strengths is helping clients avoid unnecessary litigation and costs. She is always friendly, approachable, and takes her clients' concerns very seriously.
